2005 Spring Outlook

It would be difficult for a team to perform better without winning a tournament than Georgia Tech did in the fall. In fact, the Yellow Jackets can rightly be called the best team in the nation without a tournament win, given the team's No. 2 ranking in the most recent Golfweek/Sagarin Performance Index.

Heading into the spring season, which begins at the site of Tech's last tournament win, the 2004 Taylor Made/Waikoloa Intercollegiate, head coach Bruce Heppler is far from unhappy with his team's performance.

Since Tech's last team event in the fall, Nicholas Thompson captured his first collegiate victory at the Western Refining Collegiate All-American Classic, and he was joined by teammates Mike Barbosa and Roberto Castro at the USGA's winter camp for prospective invitees to the U.S. Walker Cup team.

Castro and Thompson are both listed among the nation's top 10 players according to the Golfweek/Sagarin Index, while senior Chan Song is No. 23 and Barbosa is No. 44. With four players among the nation's top 50, there is a sense that the spring season holds plenty of promise.

"The positive from [the fall] is that we had a chance to win every time," says Heppler, now in his 10th year with the Yellow Jackets. "When you play that many good teams, you've really got to be good for three days to win. We just weren't quite good enough over a three-day period. But the fact that we were in everything, and you look at the individual rankings and the scoring averages over the fall, it was one of the better falls we've ever had on an individual basis. But there's been somebody who has played a little bit better during the course of each tournament."

Thompson, a senior from Coral Springs, Fla., who has earned All-America mention three times, won the Western Refining event against a field of 30 players who all achieved All-America status last year. He fired a 9-under-par score of 204 and won the tournament in a play-off. It was a strong ending to a fall season in which he recorded three top-10 finishes and one other top-20 in five events, and posted a scoring average of 70.93, best in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Ranked No. 8 in the nation, Thompson enters the spring with the fifth-best career stroke average ever for a Tech player (72.20), and would seem poised to win a team event at some point. Heppler hopes that victory can be a springboard for the entire team.

"It does something for him, and it does something for everyone else, too," said Heppler. "It's been a while since Troy (Matteson) was around and won a tournament. Nick has been close, and several times had the lead and played well and not won. He didn't want to leave college without a win, and maybe it'll help him not press to try. It will build confidence for him, but it does the same for other guys on the team who might beat him in a qualifier. He may instigate some winning from others."

Tech's returning All-America trio of (clockwise from top right) Nicholas Thompson, Chan Song and Roberto Castro has the Yellow Jackets ranked No. 2 in the nation.

"Nick goes out there every day and thinks it's going to be his day. He has had some great putting days. But he has lots of putts for birdie. He would love to have made some more. His ball-striking is such that, when [he makes his putts], he can shoot some ridiculously low scores. He's a hard guy to discourage."

"Nick, as much as Troy, Bryce (Molder) and Matt (Kuchar), has control of where his ball is going. He has played the last two NCAA's without a double-bogey. That's 144 holes of championship golf. That means Nick has got a pretty good idea of where to start the ball and how to finish where he wants to finish."

Tech's top five players recorded 10 top-10 finishes between them in the fall, and 15 top-20 showings.

Besides Thompson, sophomore Roberto Castro also seems poised to capture a victory or carry Tech to one after earning ACC Rookie of the Year and honorable mention All-America honors last spring. The Alpharetta, Ga., resident finished in the top 20 in all four events he played in the fall, three of those in the top 10, and recorded a stroke average of 71.00. He has seven top-10s for his career and carries a 71.65 stroke average into the spring.

"He had a wonderful fall," Heppler said of Castro, who is ranked No. 5 in the nation. "To get a 4.0 student in an engineering program, make ACC Rookie of the Year and All-American, I don't know how much more you could hope for. He did a good job of everything. He's conscientious and takes care of his business, which is what you have to do to accomplish what he did."

who has been a real workhorse performer for Tech in his career, and Mike Barbosa, a junior from St. Petersburg, Fla., who came on strong last spring and has continued to play well through the fall, give the Yellow Jackets a strong lineup one-through-four.

Song, an honorable mention All-America last spring, has not missed a Tech event in the last two years, and has played in all but one (40 of 41) during his collegiate career. He took last summer off to caddy for his sisters, Aree and Naree, on their professional circuits, and came back re-energized. Song posted a 72.07 stroke average in the fall, finished in the top 20 four times and the top 10 twice, including a tie for eighth at the Jerry Pate National Collegiate and a tie for 10th at the Western Refining Collegiate.

"I thought it would be good for Chan (to not play much)," said Heppler. "He caddied for his sister, so he got the perspective, similar to one I've had of him with the decisions that he makes. Now, when you're on the other side, you can see some course management things, or some attitude things, that you may have heard and not believed completely from the coaching staff. So he became a coach for the summer."

"So from him sitting out, having the itch again and knowing he's got nine months to go, from an energy level, an interest level and a passion level, should be a positive for him. And being on the other side of the golf ball for a while, he could learn some things from that."

"He worked on some things in his golf swing from last spring, and you started to see it. He made only one double-bogey at the NCAA. He's been more consistent from the ACC on, and that's carried on. He's put more balls in the fairway, more balls on the green, fewer balls out of play, and that's helped the consistency in his scoring."

Barbosa finished in the top 20 twice in the fall, with a tie for 10th at the Jerry Pate his best showing, counted for Tech in every round and posted a stroke average of 72.83. It continued a strong 2004 calendar year in which he posted four top-20 finishes for Tech in the spring, and won the Cardinal Amateur last summer.

"Mike came a long way last spring, and I still think he probably came the furthest," Heppler said. "He's just stacked success on top of success, where I think his confidence level has to be even higher. There's more progress than anyone on this team. He missed the U.S. Open by a shot, plays well all spring long, good tournaments all summer long, and then finishes with a victory. He's taken responsibility for his game. He doesn't look outside anymore. He looks inside."

Sophomore Kevin Larsen and junior Thomas Jordan, as they did last year, competed for the fifth spot on the team, and Larsen emerged late in the fall to grab the position going into the spring. A sophomore from Santa Barbara, Calif., Larsen tied for sixth in his first fall event at the Carpet Capital Collegiate, and went 1-0-2 at the Hooters Collegiate Match Play Championship.

Larsen struggled with swing changes throughout last spring, but showed flashes with a tie for 14th at the Taylor Made/Waikoloa Intercollegiate and 69 in the second round of the NCAA Championship. Jordan played in three events and posted a 74.44 stroke average, but counted for Tech in only five of nine rounds.

"Between the six guys that have played, we're going to find five consistent guys," said Heppler. "I don't know who that's going to be. Kevin can go from playing one event to being our best player. It's that close. A year ago, as a freshman, when we teed it up in the second tournament of the spring, Kevin was playing No. 1. He's capable of winning tournaments."

"We may not be a team that has a guy who has won eight tournaments as an individual. But if you look at what everybody is capable of, this may be the first time you can say that our fifth guy can win an event. Whoever that is, those guys won a bunch of events as junior players. So the potential is there to have a great spring and a great post-season."

Those top six players are so solid that Heppler's three freshman recruits - Adam Cohan of Wayne, Pa., David Dragoo of Scottsdale, Ariz., and Taylor Hall of LaGrange, Ga. - have been unable to crack the lineup for a tournament yet. Cohan, an AJGA All-American, was ranked as high as No. 12 among juniors before coming to Tech, Dragoo as high as No. 47 and Hall as high as No. 87.

"You realize how hard the adjustment is," said Heppler. "You have to learn about handling school and how to fit it all in. It's a jump up in the classroom, the weight room and the golf course. The other six are so far ahead, they will teach them a thing or two. I like what they'll do, and how hard they'll work. I don't know how they'll do. The other (six returning) guys are way out in front, and they should be."

"The six will make it real hard on them. Whether we're playing for two or three or four, the other guys are just ahead of them. But they can still learn a tremendous amount. They were recruited to see if one of them could come in and make a major impact, then that'd be great. If they didn't, we weren't going to put a lot of pressure on them to succeed this year. From a need standpoint, there's no pressure on them. If one of them gets in there and starts playing, then we're going to have a great team. If they can knock one of these experienced players out, then that will bode well for all of us."

The Yellow Jackets have some new events on their schedule for the spring. Following the usual beginning at the Waikoloa Intercollegiate in Hawaii, the Puerto Rico Classic and the Southern Highlands Collegiate in Las Vegas, Tech will play in the Oregon Duck Invitational in Eugene, Ore., a tri-match with Brigham Young and Washington at the Bandon Dunes Resort, and the Hootie at Bulls Bay Intercollegiate near Charleston, S.C., before the ACC Championship, which is Apr. 15-17 in New London, N.C.

The NCAA Championship is being played June 1-4 at the Caves Valley Golf Club in Owings Mills, Md., preceded by the NCAA regional events the weekend of May 19-21.

Tech Finishes Fifth at NCAA Championship

Georgia Tech finished in fifth place at the 107th NCAA men's Golf Championship, June 1-4, at The Homestead Resort in Hot Springs, Va. Tech played four rounds on the 6,679-yard, par 70 Cascades Course in 1,151 strokes, 17 shots behind California, which took a six-stroke victory over UCLA. Arizona finished third, Texas fourth.

Tech has finished in the top five of the NCAA Championship four of the last five years and five of the last seven. Tech has made it to the NCAA Championship 18 times in the last 20 years and every year since 1998. The Yellow Jackets finished the year as the nation's sixth-ranked team according to the Golfweek/Sagarin Performance Index, and ranked second in District 3 North behind top-seeded Clemson.

Individually, junior Nicholas Thompson tied for 17th place, playing 72 holes in 4-over-par 284, 17 shots off the pace of UNLV's Ryan Moore. Junior Chan Song tied for 24th place (7-over-287), sophomore Mike Barbosa tied for 36th (11-over-291), freshman Roberto Castro tied for 44th (14-over 294), and freshman Kevin Larsen tied for 76th (28-over-308).

Tech vs. the Nation and the NCAA Field

Georgia Tech's fifth place finish in the NCAA Championship gave it a final head-to-head record of 159-46-4 for the season, a 136-46-4 mark against teams in the Golfweek/Sagarin Performance Index, a 104-44-4 mark against teams in the top 50 and a 58-41-4 vs. the top 25.

Tech finished 70-33-3 head-to-head against teams that played in the NCAA Championship. In head-to-head competition against the teams seeded ahead of it, Tech was 4-4 vs. Florida, 2-8 vs. Clemson, 2-5-2 vs. Georgia, 2-0 vs. Kentucky, 2-2 vs. Oklahoma State, 3-2 vs. Oklahoma, 1-2-1 vs. UCLA, 2-0 vs. New Mexico and 2-2 vs. Arizona. The Yellow Jackets finished ahead of all but UCLA (the runner-up) and Arizona (third place).

A Quick Look at the Yellow Jackets

Georgia Tech played excellent golf in the spring, and in particular over its final five events, which included a third-place finish at the Western Intercollegiate and a tie for fifth at the Atlanta Intercollegiate in March, third place at the ACC Championship, a tie for third at the NCAA East Regional and a fifth-place showing at the NCAA Championship.

Tech had a pair of victories during the year, at the Gary Koch/Cleveland Golf Intercollegiate its final fall tournament, and at the Taylor Made/Waikoloa Intercollegiate to begin the spring schedule. The Jackets finished no lower than eighth in any spring tournament.

No Tech player won a tournament individual medal, but Castro came the closest with a second-place finish at the Gary Koch/Cleveland Golf Intercollegiate in October. Castro lost by three shots. Thompson tied for third at the ACC Championship, and Thomas Jordan, who was not on the Tech roster for the NCAA Championship, tied for third at the Ping/

Georgia Tech used the same lineup for the last six events of the spring, including the NCAA Championship, with juniors Nicholas Thompson and Chan Song, sophomore Mike Barbosa, and freshmen Roberto Castro and Kevin Larsen.

This lineup won the Taylor Made/Waikoloa Intercollegiate in early February, tied for sixth at the Southern Highlands Intercollegiate, finished third at the Western Intercollegiate, tied for fifth at the Atlanta Intercollegiate and finished third at the ACC Championship. It also tied for third at the NCAA East Regional and finished fifth in the NCAA Championship.

All five of Tech's players ranked among the top 21 of the ACC in stroke average, led by Thompson's 71.17, which was third-best. Castro ranked sixth at 71.86, Song ninth at 72.64, Barbosa 13th at 72.94 and Larsen 21st at 74.19.

Thompson, the nation's No. 18-ranked player according to the Golfweek/Sagarin Index, led Tech's late spring charge by averaging 70.50 strokes over 16 rounds in Tech's last five tournaments. Castro played well in the the ACC Championship and the NCAA East Regional, averaging 70.83 in six rounds with two top-11 finishes. Sophomore Mike Barbosa of St. Petersburg, Fla., also came on strong late with a 71.75 stroke average and three top-15 finishes in the last five events.

All five players will return next year, along with rising junior Thomas Jordan of Sea Island, Ga.. Tech has signed three incoming freshmen, Adam Cohan of Wayne, Pa., ranked 19th nationally by the National Junior Golf Scoreboard, David Dragoo of Scottsdale, Ariz., ranked 40th, and Taylor Hall of LaGrange, Ga., No. 55.

The Honor Roll

Junior Nicholas Thompson was named to the third team, and junior Chan Song and freshman Roberto Castro earned honorable mention when the Golf Coaches Association of America announced its PING All-America teams for 2004. Tech has had at least one third team -- or higher -- All-American in 13 of 14 years since 1990.

Thompson, Song and Castro all made the All-Atlantic Coast Conference team this spring, Thompson for the second time in his career, and Castro received the additional honor of ACC Rookie of the Year.

The GCAA also named Thompson and Song among its annual Cleveland Golf All-America Scholars. Thompson previously was named to the CoSIDA Academic All-District III team and is on the ballot for the All-America team.

Tech in the NCAA Championship

Georgia Tech has had a great deal of success in the NCAA Championship in recent years, finishing in the top five in four of the last five years and five of the last seven. Overall, the Yellow Jackets own 10 top-10 finishes in the event, with eight of those coming in the last 13 years.

Bruce Heppler

Head Coach ~ 10th year at Tech ~ Seven consecutive NCAA Tournaments

Bruce Heppler, one of the top coaches in collegiate golf, finished his ninth year as the head coach of the Georgia Tech golf program with another successful national showing.

With its fifth-place finish at the 2004 NCAA Championship, the Yellow Jackets have recorded four top-five finishes in the last five years and five in the last seven, Tech finished the year ranked No. 6 in the nation by the Golfweek/Sagarin Performance Index (No. 3 by Golfstat), had nine top-five finishes in 13 events and two victories.

The Yellow Jackets have had at least a pair of All-ACC honorees for seven consecutive years, including Nick Thompson, Chan Song and Roberto Castro in 2004. For seven straight seasons, Tech has had at least two players earn All-America honors, including Thompson, Wongluekiet and Castro in 2004. Three of his players, Matt Kuchar, Bryce Molder and Troy Matteson, have earned national player of the year honors.

During the summer of 2003, Heppler served as the head coach of the United States' Palmer Cup team, which faced off with a team of European collegiate players in Kiawah Island, S.C.

In 2002, Heppler led the Yellow Jackets to the best season in school history, as Tech captured seven team titles and finished second at the NCAA Championship. In the process, Heppler earned National and ACC Coach of the Year honors, garnering the national accolades for the first time and ACC recognition for the third time. During the year, the Jackets won the school's eighth ACC title, while placing all five starters on GCAA All-America teams. Under Heppler's tutelage, junior Troy Matteson became the third Tech player to win the national individual title, becoming the first player to win the event in its current team format. Also, three Jackets earned All-ACC honors, with rookie Chan Song being named ACC Rookie of the Year.

During the 2001 campaign, Heppler led Tech to its fourth-straight NCAA Championship appearance and the team's third top-four finish at that event in four years. Along with the NCAA success, the Jackets won their second ACC crown in three years, the second under Heppler, and also captured a school-record-tying five tournament wins during the year. For his efforts, Heppler was named ACC Coach of the Year for the second time in his career, and guided three All-Americans in Bryce Molder, who was also the consensus National Player of the Year, Troy Matteson and Kris Mikkelsen.

In 1999-2000 the Yellow Jackets tied the highest finish in school history with their second-place showing following a one-hole playoff. On the year, Tech captured four team titles and finished in the top four in each event it entered.

He led Tech back into the national headlines in 1997-98 as the team finished third in the NCAA Tournament and won the NCAA East Regional Championship. He mentored both national collegiate players of the year and guided the team to a No. 1 national ranking during the season.

A 44-year-old native of St. George, Utah, Heppler has demonstrated his strength as a recruiter by attracting both National Players of the Year during 1997-98 and the ACC Players of the Year for 1998, '99, 2000 and 2001. His first recruit at Tech was Matt Kuchar, who eventually won the 1997 U.S. Amateur Championship, was named the 1998 ACC Player of the Year and the Fred Haskins National Player of the Year. Bryce Molder was the Jack Nicklaus Player of the Year in '98 and in 2001, along with being named the ACC Player of the Year in '99, 2000 and 2001. Molder finished his career with the lowest career (70.69) and single-season (69.43) scoring averages in NCAA history.

Heppler, a dean's list student at Brigham Young, earned his bachelor's degree in accounting from BYU in 1985, and later received his master's degree in sport management from Massachusetts in 1988. He played golf for one year at Dixie Junior College in St. George before transferring to Brigham Young.

He became a certified public accountant in 1985 and spent one year in the firm of Huber and Associates in Salt Lake City.

Heppler began his collegiate coaching career in 1987 as the men and women's golf coach at Amherst. He then spent two years as an administrative assistant at UNLV, becoming the assistant men's golf coach at UNLV in 1989. He spent two years in that role before moving to Oklahoma State in 1991.

"Georgia Tech is a great fit for me," said Heppler. "I had other opportunities while at Oklahoma State, but felt that if I stayed long enough, a great job would come open. This is one of the five or six best programs right now if you look around at college golf's successful teams since the '90s.

"You're beginning to see alumni on the PGA Tour now, which is great for the school. With David (Duval) and Stewart (Cink) doing so well, and now with Michael Clark, Matt Kuchar and Bryce Molder all making a name for themselves, those are very good positives for the program. Young people can see they have a chance to be player of the year or win a national championship here.

"It's a great school academically, which is a real draw with the general pool of talent out there interested in playing college golf."

Heppler is married to the former Traci Schull of Southbury, Conn., and they have an 8-year-old son, Zakary Bruce, and a 4-year-old daughter, Moriah Kate. Heppler is actively involved with Atlanta Alliance for Children and is a member of the Golf Coaches Association of America.

Dr. G. Wayne Clough

President

The chief engineer of Georgia Tech's determined effort to provide technological leadership in a changing world is Dr. G. Wayne Clough, the Institute's tenth president and the first alumnus to serve in that capacity.

Clough engineered the Campaign for Georgia Tech, which raised a record $712 million in five years for 54 endowed faculty chairs, 233 endowed scholarships, 11 new buildings, and a host of academic, research and athletic programs.

Beyond campus, he gives Georgia Tech a face and voice in Washington, D.C., as a member of the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology and the executive committee of the U.S. Council on Competitiveness, and as chair of the National Academy of Engineering Committee on the Engineer of 2020. Since September, 2001, he has represented the ACC on the NCAA Division I Board of Directors.

A native of Douglas, Georgia, Wayne Clough received his bachelor's and master's degrees in civil engineering from Georgia Tech in 1964 and 1965. He earned a Ph.D. in civil engineering from the University of California, Berkeley in 1969.

He was provost and vice president for academic affairs at the University of Washington in Seattle when he answered the call to return to his alma mater as president in September of 1994. Prior to that, he had spent a decade at Virginia Tech as head of the Department of Civil Engineering, then as Dean of the College of Engineering. He also served on the faculties of Duke and Stanford universities.

A specialist in geotechnical and earthquake engineering, he is the author of more than 120 papers and reports, six book chapters, and several widely used geotechnical computer codes. He is presently a consultant to the San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit System for ongoing major seismic retrofitting. His other interests include technology and higher engineering policy, economic development, diversity in higher education and technology in a global setting.

Closer to home, he serves on the Board of Advisors for Noro-Moseley Partners, the southeast's largest venture capital fund, and on the Board of Directors of Total System Services of Columbus, Ga. He is a member of the executive committees for the Metro Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and Central Atlanta Progress, and a trustee of the Georgia Research Alliance. Georgia Trend magazine routinely includes Clough on its list of the 100 most influential Georgians.

Among his many national awards for teaching and research, Clough holds seven from the American Society of Civil Engineers and is one of the few to have been twice awarded the Norman Medal, civil engineering's oldest honor. In 2001, he received the National Engineering Award from the American Association of Engineering Societies. He has been a member of the National Academy of Engineering for more than a decade.

Wayne and Anne Robinson Clough have been married for more than 30 years and have two grown children.

Dave Braine

Director of Athletics

A national leader in his field, Georgia Tech Director of Athletics Dave Braine has made a career out of building winners in athletics and academics. In his eighth year at Tech, he has overseen tremendous growth in the Yellow Jackets' overall athletics program, while positioning Georgia Tech for the future with ambitious building projects.

Georgia Tech's overall athletics program has enjoyed unprecedented success during Braine's tenure, highlighted by the national runner-up finish in 2004 for the men's basketball program, appearances in eight straight bowl games for the football program, as well as remarkable growth in women's athletics and continued excellence in sports such as golf and baseball.

Fifteen of Tech's 17 sports programs reached post-season play in 2003-04. In fact, Tech was the only school in the nation to win a football bowl game and NCAA regional tournaments in men's basketball and baseball, and one of only three programs to win a bowl game and at least one game in the NCAA basketball and baseball tournaments.

Other athletics highlights during Braine's tenure include 14 Top 10 national team finishes, No. 1 national rankings in golf and baseball, and nine Atlantic Coast Conference team titles in six different sports. Individual accomplishments range from Troy Matteson's 2002 NCAA title in golf to three individual NCAA titles in track. Matteson is also among Tech's 25 Academic All-America honorees in the last seven years, including three in 2002-03, following a school-record five selections the previous year.

Braine was named Georgia Tech's director of athletics on June 3, 1997, succeeding Homer Rice, who retired after serving as AD from 1980-97. This is a second tour of duty for Braine at Georgia Tech. He originally came to the Flats in 1974 as defensive secondary coach on the staff of Pepper Rodgers. He served in that capacity for two years, coaching one of the nation's top secondaries in 1974, which featured three-time All-American Randy Rhino.

After two seasons as an assistant coach at Tech, Braine moved to Virginia as administrative assistant and secondary coach under Dick Bestwick in 1976. In 1978, he became assistant athletic director at Virginia. He took a similar position at Fresno State in 1983 and was promoted to associate athletic director in 1984. It was from there that he moved on to become the athletics director at Marshall in 1985.

Now in his 21st year as an athletics director, Braine held the position at Marshall from 1985 through 1987, during which time he oversaw the revitalization of a football program that had not had a winning record in many years. He then moved to Virginia Tech and made a name for himself in a 10-year tenure, in which he helped change the face of Hokie athletics.

A native of Grove City, Pa., Braine earned his bachelor's degree (1965) as well as a master's of arts and teaching (1966) at the University of North Carolina, where he was a three-time football letterman.

An avid sportsman and fly fisherman in his own right, the Tech AD has four children and seven grandchildren.

THIS IS GEORGIA TECH

Shaped by the work of generations into one of the nation's most prominent public universities, the Georgia Institute of Technology has entered an unprecedented time of opportunity for innovation and leadership.

Georgia Tech's goal is to become a source of the innovation that creates a sustainable, prosperous future for the Earth's inhabitants, and there are many signs that the Institute is on the fast track. U.S. News & World Report ranks Tech among the nation's top ten public universities and its College of Engineering among the top five programs.

Factors like strong national rankings, a rigorous curriculum, a world-renowned faculty, and endowed scholarships enable the Institute to recruit outstanding students. Admission test scores and grade point averages are among the highest at the nation's public universities. Over the past two years Tech students have won virtually all of the world's most prestigious scholarships.

As the caliber of its students has increased, the Institute has worked deliberately to strengthen and improve the undergraduate experience. At many major universities, research takes priority over teaching. However, Georgia Tech views itself as a community of learners, all engaged together in the discovery of knowledge. All faculty, even senior eminent scholars, are directly engaged with undergraduates in an effort to offer them the best of both worlds: the attention to quality teaching of a liberal arts college and the exciting dynamics of discovery in the research lab.

Tech's enrollment of more than 16,500 includes students from all 50 states and more than 2,900 international students from over 137 countries. Female enrollment has grown from two in 1952, when the first women students were admitted, to nearly 4,500, and minority enrollment is nearly 6,000.

Since 1888, when only a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering was offered, Tech's academic programs have expanded to include six world-class colleges: Architecture, Computing, Engineering, Liberal Arts, Management, and Sciences. Tech now offers degrees in 31 undergraduate programs, 51 master's degrees and 29 doctoral degree programs.

While most Tech students pursue their studies in Atlanta, a growing number earn degrees without ever setting foot on the Midtown campus. GT Lorraine, Tech's campus in Metz, France, enrolls 240 graduate students and offers an undergraduate degree program during the summer. Georgia Tech degrees can be earned in Singapore through a partnership with the National University of Singapore, and in southeast Georgia, where more than 450 students are enrolled at the newly constructed Georgia Tech-Savannah campus, home to the Georgia Tech Regional Engineering Program. Other students earn master's degrees in engineering over the Internet through programs designed specifically for online delivery.

To shape a campus worthy of its aspirations, Georgia Tech continues not only to build innovative state-of-the-art facilities, but also to gather related programs in strategically located interdisciplinary "neighborhoods" in a sustainable, "living" campus. Tech's new Technology Square, which opened in 2003, is a lively, mixed use development that extends the campus right into the middle of the Midtown Atlanta business community. The complex is home to the new Management Building with executive education and interdisciplinary centers; the 252-room Georgia Tech Hotel and Conference Center; and the Global Learning Center, which offers on-site professional education programs and distance learning facilities that connect Georgia Tech to the world. It also includes research centers and labs, as well as several retail outlets.

Closer to the heart of campus in the new Biotechnology Technology Complex, the Ford Environmental Science and Technology Building, the largest academic structure in Tech history, has opened along with the new U.A. Whitaker Biomedical Engineering Building. Toward the western end of campus where many residence halls are located, is the new Campus Recreation Center as well as the Olympic Aquatic Center.

Thanks to the generosity of four supporters of the Georgia Tech golf program, the Yellow Jackets can take advantage of a Tom Fazio-designed practice facility conveniently located just off campus.

"I felt we really needed to have our own place to practice, and Jim Dellinger, Julian Saul, Gene Brooks and Dan Yates were willing to make that happen for us," said head coach Bruce Heppler.

A tremendous asset for the team, the facility allows the Yellow Jackets to practice a wide array of skills. Covering eight acres of land and more than 320 yards in length from one end to the other, it includes two bent grass greens, one for chipping and one for putting.

There are tees on both ends, as well as several fairway bunkers from which players can hit iron shots, and there are designed wedge areas to work on the short game. There is no shot in golf that Tech's players are not able to work on.

"Plus, they are able to practice with the balls they play with in competition rather than range balls, so they can find out more about distance, control and accuracy," says Heppler. "When you have your own place and you can throw down your own balls and practice anywhere you want, that's a much better situation than going to a driving range.

"It's four blocks from the new Olympic housing. It makes practicing more convenient and allows our players to use their time better. And, of course, it's still backed up by our ability to play on some of the best golf courses in the Southeast."

DELLINGER GOLF CENTER

The Dellinger Golf Center, housed off of the Northwest stands of Bobby Dodd Stadium was dedicated on October 13, 1990 and reopened after renovation in the fall of 2003. It was named for James Dellinger, a Tech golf enthusiast, and is the perfect spot for studying, relaxing, watching television, playing pool or surfing the internet. It also is a glorious reminder of Georgia Tech's great golf tradition.

The Dellinger Center houses a lounge with a large-screen television, stereo system, DVD player, video game console, couches, a card table and a pool table for the enjoyment of Tech's golfers. Additionally, there are offices for the Tech coaching staff and a state-of-the-art locker room. The center also includes a study hall with computer stations with internet access, along with a recreational room.

The carpeted lounge area is named for Charles R. Brown, the catalyst responsible for the modern success of Tech golf.

On the walls, you'll find portraits of each of Tech's All-America golfers, from Watts Gunn in 1927 to Nicholas Thompson, plus photos of Tech teams past and a collage from Larry Mize's 1987 Masters triumph.

On display in trophy cases is memorabilia from the days of Watts Gunn, Bobby Jones and Charlie Yates. Encased in the center are Tech's National Player of the Year trophies honoring David Duval, Stewart Cink, Matt Kuchar and Bryce Molder. Also on display are Tech's four East Regional individual championship trophies, four team East Regional championship trophies and all eight ACC championship trophies. Prominent displays of Tech's GCAA All-America honorees are in both the lockerroom and television lounge.

Tech's three team trophies, the Robert Tyre Jones Award for the team's outstanding player, the Watts Gunn Trophy for the team's most improved and dedicated player, and the Charles Yates Cup for academic achievement, are also displayed here.

As part of Tech's renovation of Bobby Dodd Stadium, the renovated golf center was completed in the fall of 2003 along with the expanded north end zone of the stadium.

Tee Club Sponsors

Thanks to the generosity of Georgia Tech alumni and friends, there is one more revenue-producing sport at the Institute. Football and basketball have traditionally generated sufficient funds to pay for their operations and others, but golf has recently become a money maker.

Through the 19-year-old golf booster club, known as the Tee Club, and through the newer scholarship endowment program, the team is financially self-sufficient. This financial autonomy does not conflict with the overall mission of Tech's Athletic Association. On the contrary, it helps free funds that would otherwise be earmarked for golf for use in other sports.

The growth of Tech's golf booster system has been extremely rapid in comparison to other top programs in the country. Beginning in 1981, with the backing of Tech Director of Athletics Dr. Homer Rice, efforts were made to identify a group of alumni who would and could provide financial backing for a team that had not won a tournament in 10 years.

Golf does not have the built-in fund-raising advantages of some other sports, such as ticket sales, game programs or an outfield fence for which to sell advertising. The best way to raise funds is through contributions, and that comes primarily through the booster club.

The Tee Club began as a small committee made up of distinguished Tech alumni that began working with Dr. Rice on the revitalization of the golf program in the early 1980s. This group provided the first private financial support for the program, and within a year the committee had grown from five to 12 members, and is now composed of 16 people.

A new, exciting way to become involved with Tech athletics had been initiated, and the boosters soon became too numerous to be called a committee. The name was changed to the Tee Club, and its membership grew to approximately 300 in just seven years.

Soon, though, it became evident that the Tee Club could produce enough funds to cover operating costs, but not enough to pay for scholarships for the golfers. A scholarship endowment program was established and has grown to over $3 million, which is invested so that its returns can finance the education expenses of Tech golfers.

For their donations, supporters of Tech golf receive many benefits, including playing in two annual tournaments. Therein lies the greatest incentive for many alumni—being able to play the game with some of the nation's finest collegians. Golf is perhaps the only sport where two individuals of divergent talents are able to compete together fairly and enjoyably, and that is what attracts many donors to the program.

Golf is one of the few sports where alumni can actually interact with the players. They understand golf, they like golf, they play golf, and it is the only sport where the kids can get out and participate with the alumni.

As a direct result of the Tee Club and the endowment program, the golf team is able to do many things now that simply would not otherwise be possible. The team has competed in recent years in distant locales ranging from Tuc-son, Ariz., and Pebble Beach, Calif., to Tokyo, Japan, and San Juan, Puerto Rico. This year, the team will return to Kona, Hawai'i. Not the least of the benefits, of course, is the ability to recruit nationwide, and Tech's golfers can compete in the best tournaments regardless of location.

The financial support allowed the coaching staff to attend national junior events for recruiting and cover the cost of prospective student-athletes that visit Tech.

The Tee Club deserves much of the credit for the golf team's meteoric rise to national prominence.

It is the Tee Club's goal to completely endow all scholarships and operating costs for the golf program.

ACADEMICS AND ON-COURSE SUCCESS GO HAND-IN-HAND FOR TECH GOLF

Georgia Tech's golf team has achieved equal success both on the course and in the classroom in recent years. In the fall term of 2004, Tech had eight out of its nine members achieve Dean's List status with a 3.0 or above grade point average.

Since Bruce Heppler arrived as Tech's coach, at least four members of each team have made the Atlantic Coast Conference Academic Honor Roll, which recognizes student-athletes who record at least a 3.0 grade-point average for the entire academic year. Since 1999, at least five have made it every year, and as many as seven have been listed in a given year.

Five Tech golfers have been named All-America Scholars by the Golf Coaches Association of America, which honors juniors and seniors who record a minimum 3.2 GPA, play in 75 percent of their team's events and post a stroke average of 77 or lower.

"When I was hired, the mission statement of Georgia Tech given to me put academics as the No. 1 priority of the Institute," said head coach Bruce Heppler. "And that is exactly what we do. I think the chief example is that the 1990 national champion football team had every single one of their members graduate with their respective degrees. It is our philosophy to recruit academically-inclined student-athletes who want academics to prepare them for life."

"Once a student-athlete has his or her academics in order, then golf comes very easy. We try to make every effort to make a playing and practice schedule each year that is suited to give our student-athletes academic success. Since I have been here, every senior that has gone through Georgia Tech has earned their degree. I have to give credit to those individuals for making graduation their top priority. It is a tribute to how hard they have worked and it is the vision the Institute has for them."

Carpet Capital Collegiate

Georgia Tech's annual Carpet Capital Collegiate, which was played for the 15th time last fall, attracts many of the nation's top college programs and annually has one of the nation's toughest fields on one of the most challenging golf courses that host college events.

"Many of the coaches who have participated in previous events feel it is the best regular season event in college golf," said Tech head coach Heppler. "With the excellent ACC and SEC teams in the tournament, outcome plays a significant role in which teams are selected for postseason competition."

Georgia Tech has won the event six times, including three in a row most recently between 1999 and 2001, and has been the runner-up five other times. Clemson has four victories, first in 1993 and most recently in 2002, while Florida and Georgia have won the tournament twice each.

Florida won the inaugural Carpet Capital Collegiate in 1989, rolling to a 14-shot victory over Tech. The Gators, ranked No. 1 most of the year, finished second in the NCAA Championship. In 2002, eventual national champion Clemson won the championship by two strokes over Augusta State.

Individually, future PGA stars such as Tech's Stewart Cink and NC State's Tim Clark have won medalist honors, but former Yellow Jacket Bryce Molder surpassed them by winning the event three consecutive times between 1998 and 1999.

Three different formats have been used for the event, with the 1990, 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996 and 1997 tournaments played under the standard collegiate low-four-of-five-score system. In 1989, the low five of six scores by round were used for team totals, while the four low scores on each hole were used in 1991.

The Carpet Capital Collegiate is played at The Farm, the 6,896-yard, par-72 course designed by Tom Fazio in Rocky Face, Ga., just outside the city of Dalton. The tournament takes its name from the city, which is home to some of the largest carpet manufacturers in the world. The Farm, has been recognized by Golf Magazine as one of the nation's premier new facilities.

The original idea for the tournament, conceived by former Tech coach Puggy Blackmon and born with the help of many Tech alumni in the Dalton area, was to pit the six best teams each from the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Southeastern Conference, with the winner laying claim to being the best golf conference.

The event was envisioned as a tribute to amateur and collegiate golf in the South, particularly Georgia, where Bobby Jones and The Masters have contributed to the heritage of the sport.

The event has grown to include such nationally prominent programs as Arizona, Arizona State, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Southern California, Stanford, Texas and UCLA outside of the ACC and SEC participants. Better than half of the tournament participants each year are ranked among the nation's top 25 teams.

Fritz has long been dedicated to junior golf and the youth of the Dalton area. Boys or girls, members or non-members, Fritz has taken a personal, almost parental interest in his pupils, taking many hours of his personal time to teach the game of golf. Few people have done as much to inspire young people to enjoy golf for a lifetime.

The Golf Coaches Association of America selects a 44-man team prior to the NCAA Division I Championship. Following the championship, it divides the group into first, second and third teams of eight golfers each, with the rest recognized as honorable mention. Golfers not initially named to the 44-man team but who finish in the top 15 of the NCAA Championship are automatically added to the honorable mention unit.

In 2001, Bryce Molder (1998-2001) joined Tech's David Duval (1990-93), Gary Hallberg of Wake Forest (1975-78) and Phil Mickelson of Arizona State (1989-92) as the only Division I players ever to earn first-team All-America honors four times. Tech also placed a program-best five players on the GCAA All-America team a year ago.

Troy Matteson

NCAA Champion in 2002

Troy Matteson capped an outstanding junior season by winning the biggest tournament of the year in Columbus, Ohio, at the NCAA Championships. The victory was his fourth of the year, tying the school record held by David Duval and marked the first time since 1934 that a Yellow Jacket was crowned National Collegiate Champion.

Matteson's run to the title began inauspiciously as he opened with a 2-over-par score of 73 to stand tied for 88th place, seven shots off the tournament lead. That would change quickly, as he found his scoring groove over the next 54 holes of play.

Day two saw the first significant move, as Matteson carded a 5-under-par round of 66 to move into a tie for 12th place a 73-66-139. The steady play continued over the final two rounds, as Matteson finished with sub-par rounds of 70 and 67 respectively to take over the individual lead as the final round came to an end.

The victory marked the fourth individual title of the year for Matteson, tying the school record previously held by David Duval, along with being the third time in school history that a Yellow Jacket had been the individual national champion.

For his efforts, Matteson was named the recipient of the Arnold Palmer National Player of the Year award and earned first-team All-America honors for the first time in his career.

Watts Gunn

The Rambling Wreck and the name of Watts Gunn rose to supreme heights in 1927.

Becoming the first Georgia Tech golfer to win the National Collegiate Championship, Gunn shot a total of 302 over the 72-hole event at the Garden City Country Club to win the medal competition. He went on to despatch Walker Cup teammate Roland McKenzie, 10-9, to win the individual title, and his 69 in the final round broke the course record. He also helped Tech win the Southern Intercollegiate title the same year.

Along with winning the collegiate championship, Gunn was a two-time U.S. Walker Cup team member, joining the squad in both 1926 and 1928. In those two events, he compiled a combined 4-0 record, posting a pair of victories in each.

Gunn was inducted into the Georgia Tech Hall of Fame in 1961. The annual Yellow Jacket men's golf team award for the season's most improved player is named in Gunn's honor.

Charlie Yates

in 1934

Yates, who won the British Amateur in 1938 and the Western Amateur in 1935, won the Georgia state championship in 1931 and 1935, advanced to the second round of match play in the U.S. Amateur and was the low amateur in the first Masters tournament in 1934.

He culminated a fine college career by winning the 1934 National Collegiate Championship in Cleveland, Ohio, joining Watts Gunn as the only two Tech golfers ever to do so. Yates is one of six Yellow Jackets to have competed in the Walker Cup, as he was a team member in both 1936 and '38, compiling a 3-0-1 record in those matches. In 1953, he was named the captain of the Walker Cup team and was an honorary captain in 1985.

Yates played in the first 11 Masters tournaments, five times finishing as low amateur and three times finishing in the top 24.

He was inducted into the Georgia Tech Hall of Fame in 1959 and an award named in his honor has been given annually to the member of the Yellow Jacket golf team displaying the most outstanding academic achievement.

Bobby Jones - Atlanta, Ga.

On Sept. 27, 1930, Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., of Atlanta walked off the 11th green at the Merion Cricket Club and into history. No one before him had won golf's four major championships in a single year. No one has done it since.

No one might ever do it again.

"It may be 60 years, if then, before we see another Grand Slam," said Joe Dey, former commissioner of the PGA Tour and former executive director of the United States Golf Association.

"You never say never," said Ben Hogan, who was 18 when Jones won the Slam and remains the only golfer to win three professional majors in one year. "But considering the times — there are so many more good players — it's improbable that any player will win all four."

Of all the single-season sustained records of excellence in major sports, Jones' mark has stood the longest. Longer than Babe Ruth's 60 home runs, a record that last 34 years after he set it in 1927; longer than Joe DiMaggio's 1941 hitting streak of 56 games, which is still alive after 49 years; longer than Wilt Chamberlain's 50.4 points-per-game average, set in 1961-62; longer than Bryon Nelson's PGA Tour streak of 11 straight victories and 18 overall in 1945.

The four tournaments Jones won — the national Open and amateur championships of the United States and Britain — originally were known as the "Impregnable Quadrilateral." That term eventually evolved into the Grand Slam, a term that stuck even when the PGA Championship and the Masters replaced the two amateur tournaments in the mythical foursome.

To understand the magnitude of Jones' deed, consider that in the ensuing 60 years only four players — Hogan, Gene Sarazen, Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus — in their careers have won each of the four events that make up the modern Slam.

In golf's record books, Hogan comes across as the most serious challenger to Jones record when in 1953 the Texan won the Masters, U.S. Open and British Open. But because there was some overlap in dates of the British Open and the PGA Championship, the possibility of Hogan completing the Slam never existed.

Perhaps the most incredible thing about Jones' Slam is that he planned it. He didn't have a name for it, nor was he glory-seeking. His reasons were purely personal. Being an amateur golfer, his finances and family obligations would not allow him to play in all four tournaments after 1930. As it turned out, he didn't have to. He announced his retirement from competitive golf a few weeks after winning the U.S. Amateur. He was 28.

Dey, then a 23-year-old sportswriter for The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, was there at Merion in Ardmore, Pa., when Jones completed the Grand Slam. Now 83, Dey said Jones' performance was "simply unbelievable.

"I saw every shot, and I haven't seen anyone since as dominant as Jones was in that Amateur," Dey said. "None of his matches went past the 14th hole. He cruised along. Considering the pressure and the crowds — you have to remember in those days the fairways weren't roped — it was a remarkable performance by a remarkable player."

Dey has seen all the great players and says only Hogan and Nicklaus equaled Jones in figuring out a way to win.

"If Nicklaus couldn't do it, I don't think it could be done. Maybe Hogan could have, but there wasn't that much emphasis on the Grand Slam during his day. I don't see anyone out there today who knows how to win like they did and like Jones did.

"Also, it's just too hard now because there are too many good players to expect one to win all four, and too, I believe the intense media attention given to the majors creates tremendous pressure that begins to build when someone wins the first two."

Hogan, now 78, agrees about the media pressure. "It's incredible," he said, "much more so than when I played. Because it was impossible for me to play in all four in 1953, there was none of that."

Dey credits Jones with the Grand Slam transformation from two amateurs and two Opens to today's four pro majors. "When Jones retired, there was not another amateur of his ability, and after he started Augusta National, and the Masters took hold, the attention turned away from the amateurs to the professionals," he said.

"What Jones did was win the Grand Slam, then without realizing it, created another one."

How good was Jones? From 1923 through 1930, Jones won 13 major national titles in the U.S. and Great Britain, 62 percent of the championships he entered.

In the last 11 British and U.S. Opens in which he played, he finished no worse than second in 10, winning seven times. And from the time he was 14 to the time he was 28, no player ever beat him twice in championship match play.

It also must be noted that Jones was hardly a full-time golfer. Often he would go months without picking up a club. Instead, he studied mechanical engineering at Georgia Tech, got a degree in English literature at Harvard, dabbled in real estate and then attended law school at Emory. In his 13 years in major championship competition, he was a student, high school or college, in nine of them. He played only 52 tournaments in that span, an average of four a year, and won 23.

Though Jones was born and raised in Atlanta, there is no public display of his memorabilia. His old locker remains at East Lake Country Club men's locker room and several pictures hang on the walls of the grill room. Most of his trophies and his famous putter, Calamity Jane, are on display in a showcase in the Jones Room at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Jones died in the early evening of Dec. 18, 1971. He played his last round of golf in 1948, the year he was stricken with syringomyeliam, a disease that attacks the central nervous system. His burial is in Atlanta's Oakland Cemetery. His tombstone reads:

Robert Tyre Jones, Jr.

Born 1902 Died 1971

No other words were thought necessary.

This story was written by the late Tom McCollister, who covered golf for the Atlanta Journal-Constitution and paid this tribute to Bobby Jones on the 60th anniversary of his Grand Slam, in the Sept. 27, 1990, edition of the Journal and Constitution.
